Throughout my life as a religious and especially in recent years as a priest, many people have asked me this question: How do I have patience with others?

The older we get, the more easily we lose patience. And we can blame it on stress, work, family, problems, stress, and an endless number of other things and situations, but if all the above were to disappear or improve, the truth is that we would probably still lose patience.

People also tell me that they pray to God, asking for patience, but it seems that the more they ask for it, the more they lose it. In view of this, it is necessary to keep in mind the following: Patience, according to Galatians 5:22–23, is the fruit of the Holy Spirit. This means that patience is not simply a human ability but a divine gift that develops as we yield to the Holy Spirit and allow Him to work in our lives.

Now, the fact that patience is a fruit of the Holy Spirit does not mean that we do not have to do our part, because every divine gift is matched by our human disposition. Patience is not something magical; it does not mean that in the face of difficult situations, I will not feel anything or that in the face of despair, I will experience peace.

To have patience is, from human experience, not to respond violently to the impulses we experience. It is to be silent, to calm anger, not to argue, and not to respond at that moment. Patience, as a fruit of the Spirit, is learning to face those hard moments with tranquility and to unburden ourselves afterwards in the intimacy of prayer with God.

Fr. Juan José Díaz

Paciencia...

A lo largo de mi vida como religioso y, sobre todo, en los últimos años ya como sacerdote, muchas personas me han hecho esta pregunta: ¿Cómo le hago para tener paciencia con los demás?

Y es que, mientras más viejos somos con mayor facilidad perdemos la paciencia. Y podemos echarle la culpa al estrés, al trabajo, a la familia, a los problemas y a un sin fin de cosas y situaciones, pero si todo lo anterior desapareciera o mejorara, la verdad es que lo más probable es que perdamos aun así la paciencia.

Me dicen también las personas, que oran a Dios pidiéndole paciencia, pero que pareciera que mientras más la piden, más la pierden. Ante esto, es necesario tener presente lo siguiente: la paciencia, de acuerdo con Gálatas 5:22-23 es un fruto del Espíritu Santo. Esto significa que la paciencia no es simplemente una habilidad humana, sino un regalo divino que se desarrolla en la medida en que nos rendimos al Espíritu Santo y permitimos que él trabaje en nuestras vidas.

Ahora bien, el hecho de que la paciencia sea un fruto del Espíritu Santo no significa que no tengamos que hacer lo que nos corresponde, porque a todo regalo divino le corresponde nuestra disposición humana. La paciencia, no es algo mágico, no significa que ante las situaciones difíciles no voy a sentir nada, o que ante la desesperación experimentaré paz.

Tener paciencia, es desde la experiencia humana no responder violentamente a los impulsos que experimentamos. Es callar, calmar el enojo, no discutir, no responder en ese momento. La paciencia como fruto del Espíritu, es aprender a enfrentar esos momentos duros con tranquilidad y desahogarnos después, en la intimidad de la oración con Dios.

The Lamentation of Job

In our first reading this weekend we hear Job expressing feelings we all have at times. Life is drudgery, with nothing to really look forward to. All day we long for night and an end of drudgery while at night we cannot sleep and long for morning. Life is short and there is no hope of escaping death in the end. The entire book of Job addresses the problem of evil: If God is good, why do terrible things happen to good people?

The first thing we should learn from this reading is empathy and compassion for people who are suffering. Job is not alone; everyone suffers in this life. No one goes through life unscathed. In the Book of Job he has three friends who come to console him, but spend all their time explaining how, since God is good, he must have done something to deserve all of his misfortunes. Job's three friends are correct in their arguments about God, but they are wrong about Job, who is a saint. They approach him with logic and reason without considering what he is feeling; how he has been crushed by adversity and overwhelmed with grief. Sometimes it's far more important to hear someone than to speak to them. Some things can't be fixed.

God answers Job in the end, but it's an answer that answers nothing. All He says is: "I am God and who are you to question me?". Job accepts this answer, and this is held to his credit. There is no answer even as we see Christ also suffer unjustly on the Cross.

It's easy to trust in God when life is filled with joy and things go well. But it's far more important to trust in God when we are suffering and in pain. When we don't understand and when we feel abandoned.

Blessings and peace, Deacon Steve

El Lamento de Job

En nuestra primera lectura de este fin de semana escuchamos a Job expresar sentimientos que todos tenemos en ocasiones. La vida es monótona, con nada que realmente esperar. Todo el día anhelamos la noche y el fin del trabajo pesado, mientras que por la noche no podemos dormir y anhelar la mañana. La vida es corta y al final no hay esperanza de escapar de la muerte. Todo el libro de Job aborda el problema del mal: Si Dios es bueno, ¿por qué a la gente buena le suceden cosas terribles?

Lo primero que debemos aprender de esta lectura es la empatía y la compasión por las personas que sufren. Job no está solo; todos sufren en esta vida. Nadie sale ileso de la vida. En el Libro de Job él tiene tres amigos que vienen a consolarlo, pero pasan todo el tiempo explicándole que, siendo Dios bueno, debe tener hecho algo para merecer todas sus desgracias. Los tres amigos de Job tienen razón en sus argumentos sobre Dios, pero se equivocan respecto a Job, que es un santo. Se acercan a él con lógica y razón sin considerar lo que está sintiendo; cómo ha sido aplastado por la adversidad y abrumado por el dolor. A veces es mucho más importante escuchar a alguien que hablar con él. Algunas cosas no se pueden arreglar.

Dios le responde a Job al final, pero es una respuesta que no responde a nada. Lo único que dice es: "Yo soy Dios y ¿quien eres tu para interrogarme?". Job acepta esta respuesta, y esto se le da crédito. No hay respuesta incluso cuando nosotros vemos también a Cristo sufrir injustamente en la Cruz.

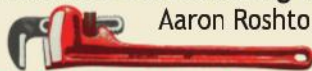

Es fácil confiar en Dios cuando la vida está llena de alegría y las cosas van bien. Pero es mucho más importante confiar en Dios cuando sufrimos y tenemos dolor. Cuando no entendemos y cuando nos sentimos abandonados.

Bendiciones y paz, Diácono Steve.
